"Why Should I Attend Lodge"

I'm a Mason, I have paid my fees, I've had my three degrees and my dues are paid. Why should I attend Lodge? The answer to me is very obvious. For various reasons, known only to yourself, you sought admission into our order. The very thought of Lodge, should indicate to anyone that there would be Lodge meetings, and as a member of the craft, you would be expected to hold up your end, come to Lodge meetings and do your part. Now this seems to me to be quite basic or academic, not too much unlike enrolling in a school or college, paying your tuition fees and never attending.

Yes, in your own mind, you are a Mason. You were elected by the brethren on our own voluntary petition, that you might become associated with us in this great and good work. You received your three degrees, or presumably you did. You pay your dues, wear a lapel pin or a ring with a Masonic emblem on it, and to all outward appearances, you are a Freemason.

Yes, you are a member of the Masonic Fraternity, but Masonry is much more than that. Masonry goes far beyond just being a member. Masonry is a way of life, and the only possible way to fully comprehend or fully appreciate its teachings is by constant research and study, and the best place to get these, is by regular attendance at its communications. I can truthfully say, without fear of contradiction, that any brother, who attends any lodge meeting, cannot help but be the better for it. It matters not whether it is a regular meeting of the Lodge, an emergent communication or a communication of Grand Lodge. A little good brushes off on him every time and there is bound to be revealed to him more light in Masonry.

If Masonry does not have leaders in its several constituent Lodges, who are willing for the good of the Order, to give that leadership which gives Masonry the overwhelming and guiding force for good that it is today, then we would be closing the doors to our Lodges and Masonry would not be going forward as it should and must for the preservation of those great Freedoms which you and I are privileged to enjoy, i.e.: Freedom of Speech, Freedom of Religion, and Political Freedom.

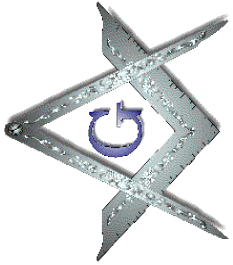

Today there are ideologies fast at work in the world: ideologies that are out to encompass the world which are contrary to the freedom of peoples everywhere. It is only through moral improvement and social improvement, basic Masonic principles, which are taught and symbolized throughout the works of Masonry, and which can only be assimilated by continuous attendance at our Lodge meetings, that we can hope to keep people free and instill in their minds, a clear and concise picture of that which is good, just, and right.

Let us resolve, therefore, to attend our Lodge and strengthen ourselves for the good of ourselves, our Lodge, and Freemasonry in general.
