

September, 1995

Brethren, the gavel is about to sound to call the Craft from refreshment back to labor, and I hope we will all answer the call.

Even though we take a break from Lodge in the summer, some people, by necessity, still continue to labor on behalf of the Lodge. The Secretary continues to update Lodge records, make and receive necessary communications, and keep the Master informed of things that are happening. The Committees that were appointed to coordinate and plan fall events are meeting about their respective duties. A couple of instructors are meeting with their candidates, and the Master continues to make contact with various people and keep things going. Also, for all of us, the responsibilities of life continue, if not increase. We have yards to care for, projects to do, various house upkeep and maintenance duties to perform, and other responsibilities to perform. Add to these our duties to perform, and other responsibilities to perform. Add to these our work in any other civic or religious organizations we belong to and you see that our lives can become very hectic. Also, my wife and I had a baby boy, Mitchell, on August 11th. You can imagine how hectic my life is right now.

There is, however, one duty that Masons cannot take a break from, even in the summer, and that is to act and conduct ourselves as Masons. People learn much more from seeing than from hearing. Consequently, our actions have a much greater impact than our words. A famous television Evangelist used to speak out against pornography and sexual immorality, however, when he was caught with a prostitute, his words were rendered null and void. The same standard applies to us. We proclaim ourselves, rightly and proudly so, to be Masons. This tells the world that we conduct ourselves by a higher standard. People will watch us to see how we conduct ourselves to see how Masons work. Therefore, anything we do will reflect not only on us, but also on Masonry. Nobody is perfect and we all have our times of anger, sadness, depression and bad moods. We will be short with people and have times of conflict. As Masons, we need to respond quickly to these times to make things right and to try to act by the Square. If we do this, we will show others that Masons act according to a higher standard and we may influence some to seek membership.

I hope that we will all continue to strive to show the light of Masonry to the world.

Fraternally,
BRIAN THOMAS, WM
